

From a Difficult Life, Emerge Out-of-this-World Gifts...Part 3

By Melissa Jagst, with Karen Larre

In each of the past two articles, I've shared a bit about my childhood, and my belief that it is because of my hard life that I am able to receive the gifts of mediumship, clairvoyance, clairaudience and clairsentience. My experiences also enable me to bring information through for others, without judgment. This lack of judgment is astounding to some and I am often asked, "how can you bring through information on such horrible things and deliver it so neutrally?" It's really pretty easy for me. How can I judge anyone for anything they have done, when people who loved me allowed terrible things to happen to me, AND I have done unspeakable things to myself?

When I was about 7 years old, My mom married Earl. I know that as a struggling single mother, Earl presented the perfect package. Although he was not physically violent, he was very emotionally abusive. One day, when my mom wasn't home, I was preparing to take a bath. I laid the towel on the floor and went to get fresh clothes. Earl came in to the bathroom just then and started yelling at me to pick up my towel. I said, "NO!" He then chased me back into the bathroom. I closed the door and locked it. He took his belt off and was screaming and swearing at me to open the door, threatening to hit me with the belt. I remember that I was so scared. He never did things like that when my mom was there, so I didn't know how to tell her when these things happened. This day (and on several other traumatic occasions), I sat on the bathroom counter and checked to see if a tooth was a little loose. Instead of wiggling the tooth a little each day, I took a knife and forced my tooth out. The pain was overwhelming and blood was everywhere. I didn't realize then that I was doing this in an effort to take away my internal pain and that the endorphins that kicked in were the equivalents of my first "drugs". This would become the first of many acts of injury and self-mutilation. More experiences will be forthcoming in future articles.

Recently, I was walking down the hall, getting ready to do a reading. Before the appointment with the woman started, her deceased mother started flooding me with information. She provided details about what happened to her daughter and her stepbrother and other siblings, and I was able to relay the reasons why things happened the way they did. The woman was truly shocked by the information that came through me and after hearing it all, felt at peace.

The interesting thing that happened next was that I was compelled to ask the woman if she had been to the pound lately. She said yes, and asked me how it knew that. Her cat that had passed away had told me! We were both in shock, and after that the flood gates opened. The next thing I knew, I was talking to her living dog at home. The dog was unhappy because he wasn't getting enough attention, and is left outside in a cage. She confirmed that yes, her dog is kept outside in a cage because he had bitten someone a year before. Her husband didn't want to get rid of him or get another dog. The dog's response was, "I would be happier if they let me go." He wanted to die because living outside in a cage was worse than having no life to him. I am so amazed that each day I become more open to receive, more gifts are revealed!
